CAMP ON THE BATTLE-FIELD, I NEAR PITTSEURG LANDING, TRNN., > April 10, 1862. April 10, 1862. )

After following a large hattle for a number of months, I finally had the pleasure of taking part in the hattle of the war, the greetest battle ever fought on this continent, and I really believe that the history of the world gives no account of nehler musketry fight. On the merning of the 6th we were encauped near Sivenuch; about 7 violes. A M. we heard the componding at 1 three tables and it is said it will be a bigger hight than has ever heen fought yet—we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will give them the has ever heen fought yet —we will g o'clock A. M. we heard the cannonading; at 1 o'clock P. M. we marched in quick time for the written the last line he ever would write. From scene of battle, distant only shout eight miles, Lis letter, it is easy to see that this bettle was and lncky indeed was our arrival, es Gen. Grant'e army was completely demoralized, and the men | say that Gen. Beanregard end Johnson rode could not be persuaded or forced into the contest agein. About 6 o'cleck P. M. Col. Ammen's hrigada crossed the river, and saved us for the all that was necessary was to rush upon us and day, as night soon closed upon the cosne, and drive us into the river-so far from anticipating both armles lay upon the field nnder arms. At that we would renew the engagement on the daylight on the morning of the 7th, companies A and B of the 21 Kentucky infantry were thrown out as skirmishers, to drew the fire of the enemy and ascertain their position. These companies drove in the enemy's pickets, cepturing eigh prisoners, and silencing one of the enemy's but teries. The battle soon became general, and never did men behave better. I em unebla to speak of the hebavier of hut a very few of the regiments eugeged, as our line of bettle was over seven miles long. The 2d Kentucky Infantry, under Col. Sedgwick, did noble duty, and wor Imperishable laurels. At 8 o'clock A. M. this regiment was ordered to charge a hattery, which order wes most handsomely executed, as the battery was speedily taken end one of the guns spiked by Cept. Stacey, who fought like a hero

In the evening, at 8 o'cl ck, the 2d was again ordered to charge upon a hattery, the order being purely Nelsonlau: "I want that hattery taker. "I'll do it, elr," wes the answer, and our little Colonel kept his word, rallying hie men, urging them by word and deed. They mele the most decisive charge of the dey, strewing the ground hefore them with heaps of the enemy, end finelly, making a desperate cherge, they encceeded in gaining the battery and opening it upon the enemy, who retired from the field to come upon it no more. During the engegement, our officers suffered severely. Capt. Spellmire, of Company E, wes killed inetantly while urging and encouraging his men to the fight. Capt. Smith, of stantly employed. Company T, was severely wounded, and Lieut. Miller, of the seme company, was so severely wounded that he died in fifteen minutes, his lest words being, "How is it going?" Capt. Bodine, of Company G, Lient. Taylor, of Company A, and Adjutent Wl. del, were ell slightly wounded while in the discherge of their duty. It is hard to discriminate where all did bravely and well, but we ere constrained to render tu Col. Sedgwick, Lieut. Col, Spencer, M jor Hurd, Capts. Bodine and Stecey, Lieuts, Cook and Tooley, and as composed as if nothing had happeoud. Onr brave, gruff Gen. Nelson proved himself the hero of the day, leading the reglment into the fight as he wished to engage them. During the thickest of the battle it is said that he was pacing thoughtfully up and down in rear of a regiment | ded which was charging, when auddanly he wheeled round to some one near him and remarked: "My division is fighting fifty thousand of them and whipping them, too." He passed immediately io my rear once when the halls were flying thick as tle se he sung out, "Meke it too hot for them my lads." Throughout the entire day he seemed to be nbigultous. At one moment on the right and the next on the left. Let others say what they please, and praise whom they please, this fact is beyond dispute. But for General Nelson we should have suffered a disastrous defeat instead of winning a glorious victory, and he is deserving of all praise for the energy he displayed in bringing his troops upon the field in the very nick of time, and for his soldisrly bearing throughout the entire day. The following is from an article in the Cincinnati Edquirer of Wednesday: Cincinnate Enquirer of Wednesday:

12 The dectrine upon which the American Revolution was fought was that governments derive

12 their just powers from the concent of the government. This dectrina may be light and it imay be wrong, but it has heretofore always in the Urlead States here helden to ha self-evident. If it was true three fourths of a century ago, it is fair to presume, until the contrary is shown; that it is true to day. If it is true now, it is odligatory, and the plas that its eperation is tempora-

of Republication or dectrine of the Constitution.
Instead of complaining of and trying to rush over those impediments in its path, which were planted by wise men a long time ago to sland as the adernal and immovable hulwarks of human freadom, would it not be better to search out and find a naw and better path? When our Government becomes a Government of force over a conducted country, it will be a Government of force at home. We have seen that while the change has been going on in the one case, it has also being going on in the one case, it has also being going on in the one case, it has also being going on in the other. "Our forefails retailed and set on fire. Were there ever before all for liberty." Do we rue the bargain and desire to retread their glorious path, but in a back-ward direction?

We den't know that we fully understand the intention of these remarks, but we take home despotism, shall vote for the resteration tion. If the Cincinnati paper means this, i nteans treason, palpable treason; and its purose must be to commend itself to Southern rebels and promote their cause.

Undoubtedly it is a general fruth that "govcrninents derivo their Just powers from the consent of the governed," hat it is abourd to a soction of a nation, or of a State, or coun ty, or turn, has a right to break off from the The United States is a country, a nation, cstahlished as such by our fathers and recognations of the earth; and her southern portion has no more right, upon the pretext of selfgovernment, to hreak off from her than the the other part.

Every nation has a right to savo itself from dissolution. To concedo to any section the right of destroying it upon the pretext of "tho consent of the governed" or any other pretext would be subversive of the whole principle of human government.

Gen. Prentiss, at Pittshurg Landing, was in the advance prior to the battle, but he sent out neither sconts nor pickets. The forces into his camps, and seeing all the movements there, and ho knew it not. Thousands o' them encamped on Saturday night within a mile of him, and he had no dream of their heing within twenty miles.

Maoy believe that Gen. P., discovering his terrible and most criminal hinnder when the unannonneed rebels were in his camps hayoneting his holpless soldiers in their very tents, was hut too glad to surrender himself a prisoner of war, feeling that he could never havo the face to meet his loyal friends again. . If we are doing injustice to Gen. Prentiss, we shall be happy to correct it. If he is guilty nf tho neglect charged upon him, we presume he can have no wish to be exchanged. There can be no place in the United States where he would like to live.

THE WARTRACE SEIRMISH. - The affair of the 11th inst, by Majer Shanklie, of the Forty-cecand Indiana, with one hundred and thirteen of his command egainst a force of rebel cavalry three aundred strong, under Colonel Stevens, was a hand to hand fight for a part of the time, and very desperete. Our loss was four killed, four other dangeronsly or mortally wounded, and thirty-three coverely and slightly wounded. The rebels left seven dead on the field, and bore three or four other bodies from the field, and had every large number wounded, and nine librase killed. We took three horses, a dozen sadler, several any royolvers and horse-nistols, sahred and shot-guns. After a fight of near half an hour they were completely ronted, and field in every direction. Major Shanklin was detailed to guard hridges at Wartrace, and the gallantry of his mea, who were recrulted from the river counties.
